

CDR Karen Matthews, MD, MPH, MBA, is a navy liaison officer in the Office of Global Affairs, Health and Human Services focusing on issues of global health security and biodefense. Prior to this assignment she worked in the office of Senator Debbie Stabenow as a Robert Wood Johnson Health Policy Fellow. Matthews has also worked at the Defense Health Agency (DHA) as the branch chief of Health Information Exchange (HIE). In this position, she oversaw the development and implementation of a sustainable HIE business plan for the Military Health System (MHS). She assisted the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (PDASD), Health Affairs on the Health Benefits Working Group in support of the Presidential Commission for Military Compensation and Retirement Modernization (MCRMC). Additionally, she assisted and traveled with the PDASD and the DHA Director, coordinating meetings and site visits in support of the DHA and the implementation of the Enhanced Multi-Service Markets. Matthews has received the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Navy and Marine Corps Commendation Medal, and the Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medal while on active duty. She earned her MPH and MBA from Johns Hopkins University and her MD from Loma Linda University. She completed her internship at Maine Medical Center, her preventive medicine residency at Johns Hopkins University, and her radiology residency at Naval Medical Center Portsmouth. She also completed an MRI fellowship with Dr. Stephen Pomeranz at Proscan Imaging in Cincinnati, Ohio.