[D1] Child maltreatment is defined as: all forms of physical and/or emotional ill-treatment, sexual abuse, neglect or negligent treatment or commercial or other exploitation, resulting in actual or potential harm to the child's health, survival, development or dignity in the context of a relationship of responsibility, trust or power. The perpetrators of child maltreatment may be parents and other family members, caregivers, friends, acquaintances, strangers, others in authority (such as teachers, soldiers, police officers, clergy, employers, health care workers) if over 5 years older.

[D2] The terms child maltreatment prevention and child protection partly overlap and are, hence, easily - and often - confused. Child maltreatment prevention means to reduce the frequency of new child maltreatment cases through direct efforts to remove or reduce the underlying causes and risk factors, and by harnessing the indirect effects of other policies and programmes that may contribute to reducing exposure to risk factors and underlying causes. The emphasis of child maltreatment prevention is on preventing child maltreatment before it happens. Effective child maltreatment prevention programmes usually address specific sub-types of child maltreatment - such as inflicted traumatic brain injury, physical abuse, or sexual abuse - that can be clearly defined and reliably measured at the level of the population.

[D3] Child protection refers, according to UNICEF, to preventing and responding to violence, exploitation and abuse against children – including commercial sexual exploitation, trafficking, child labour and harmful traditional practices, such as female genital mutilation/cutting and child marriage.

Although this UNICEF definition of child protection includes prevention, in practice, it has mainly involved providing support and treatment after child maltreatment has already occurred and protecting children from further maltreatment. Indeed in most countries in the world the dominant response to child maltreatment is focused upon the establishment of child protection services and systems that are designed to identify child maltreatment cases as early as possible after they have occurred and then provide services with a view to stopping further maltreatment and mitigating its consequences.

[D4] Adverse childhood experiences are potentially traumatic experiences in a person's life occurring before the age of 18 years which may consist of one or more of physical abuse, sexual abuse, emotional abuse, neglect, mental illness of a household member, problematic drinking or alcoholism of a household member, illegal street or prescription drug use by a household member, divorce or separation of a parent, domestic violence towards a parent and incarceration of a household member. Prolonged exposure to one or more adverse childhood experiences can lead to toxic stress, and the development of health risk behaviours such as smoking, alcohol misuse, self-harm, street drug use, risky sexual behaviour, antisocial behaviour, further victimization and with increased risks of developing noncommunicable diseases, mental ill health and impaired sexual and reproductive health.

[Q1] Q1. Is child maltreatment a problem in your country?

It is a big problem [A2]

[Q2] Q2. Please indicate if there is a national action plan/policy for the protection of children from maltreatment.

No national action plan/policy, but, at least one sub-national action plan/policy [A2]

[Q3] Q3. Please indicate if there is a national action plan/policy for the prevention of maltreatment against children.

No national action plan/policy, but, at least one sub-national action plan/policy [A2]

[Q4] Q4. Please indicate if there is a national action plan or policy for the prevention of noncommunicable diseases. If none exists, please indicate if there is at least one sub-national action plan or policy.

No national action plan/policy, but, at least one sub-national action plan/policy [A2]

[Q5] Q5. Are there either one or more government agencies or departments that take responsibility for overseeing and/or coordinating child maltreatment prevention activities in your country?

Yes, multiple agencies/departments take responsibility for overseeing and/or coordinating child maltreatment prevention activities in your country. [0.5]

[Q5a_SQ001] Q5a. If yes, please indicate the name/names of the agency/agencies or department/departments and its/their status. (Within a government ministry (or department) (please specify):)

Yes [Y]

[Q5a_SQ001comment] Q5a. If yes, please indicate the name/names of the agency/agencies or department/departments and its/their status. (Comment)

[Q5b] Q5b. Is funding available to aforementioned agency(s)/department(s) for overseeing and/or coordinating child maltreatment prevention activities in your country?

Yes, fully funded [1]

[Q6] Q6. Is there a system in place for regular exchange of information between different stakeholders on child maltreatment
and child maltreatment prevention? -

Examples of stakeholders are: different agencies and sectors involved in child maltreatment prevention, such as policymakers, researchers, advocates, and practitioners. - Examples of such systems are: web-sites, "clearing house" for evidence and information on child
maltreatment prevention, regular meetings,
conferences, or symposia, etc.

No [0]

[Q7] Q7. Are there available representative survey data on child maltreatment
victimization?

No national or sub-national survey [0]

[Q8] Q8. Does your country have regular reports on child mental wellbeing (for example from school based surveys of mental wellbeing of children, as suggested in EUR/RC64/13)?

No [0]

[Q9_PR] Q9. Are there available
standardized, nationally representative survey data on victimization rates (either incidence or prevalence or both)?

Prevalence is a measure of all individuals
affected by the disease or condition within a particular period of time. It is important to specify the time period (life time or last year)
and the population denominator (e.g., per 100 population). Incidence is a measure of the number of new individuals who develop a disease or condition during a particular period of time. It is usual to express this as the number of new cases per year per population denominator (e.g., per 100,000 or 10,000 or per 100 population). (Prevalence rate)

[Q9_IR] Q9. Are there available standardized, nationally representative survey data on victimization rates (either incidence or prevalence or both)? Prevalence is a measure of all individuals affected by the disease or condition within a particular period of time. It is important to specify the time period (life time or last year) and the population denominator (e.g., per 100 population). Incidence is a measure of the number of new individuals who develop a disease or condition during a particular period of time. It is usual to express this as the number of new cases per year per population denominator (e.g., per 100,000 or 10,000 or per 100 population). (Incidence rate)

Yes [1]
